

KS3 & 4 RESOURCE 2

A

It's your friend's birthday. You spend ages choosing them the perfect present. You give it to them. They don't say thank you. How do you feel?

B

It's your birthday and your best friend buys you a really thoughtful present. You love it, but you forget to say thank you. How do you think they feel?

C

Your friend's mum gives you a lift to football practice after school. You forget to say thank you. How do you think your friend's mum might feel?

D

Your mum gives you and your friends a lift to football practice. You friends don't say thank you to her. How do you think your mum feels?

E

You fall out with your friends at school. You're on your own at break times. You share your feelings with a member of staff. They give you some great advice and you sort it out with your friends. You feel much better, but you don't say thank you to the member of staff. Why would it be a good thing to say thank you?

F

The caretaker has lost their car keys. They are looking for them at break time. You and some of your friends give up part of your break time to help them look. You find them and give them back to the caretaker. They don't say thank you. How do you feel?

G

You help your mum find a book she thought she'd lost. She is very grateful when you find it for her. She looks so happy and thanks you. How does that make you feel?

H

You've lost your new phone. You've been looking for it for ages. Your mum helps you find it. You're so happy. You say thank you over and over. Your mum looks really pleased. How do you feel about that?

I

It's your mum's birthday and you really want to make her a cake. You've not made that many cakes before so your dad helps you. It turns out really well and you're really happy. You thank your dad for helping you. How do you think he feels about this?

J

It's your birthday and your little brother makes a huge effort to make you a cake. It's delicious. You're really pleased and say a huge thank you. He looks so happy that you like it. How do you feel about this?

Send a free thank you e-card at www.thankateacher.co.uk

